

Low-Power FM radio, or LPFM for short, refers to 10 to 100 watt, nonprofit radio stations with a reach of only a few miles. Because LPFM stations are non-profit and reach a small broadcast area, they hold great promise to offer truly community-driven and locally-oriented programming. They will add diversity to the airwaves and allow for a greater range of debate and local programming than corporate radio can offer.